

Evangelio: Lc 4, 21-30

Ecological attitude:
collaborate together with others to take care of our common home

- In this Sunday's gospel we see that Jesus, who is in the synagogue of his home town of Nazareth, tells his countrymen: God does not exclude anyone.
- Hearing what he said, the people got angry. They wanted to throw him off a ravine. This was because they believed that God only loves them and that those who do not belong to their religion (ic the pagans) do not deserve God's kindness and affection.
- Jesus told them a great truth: God does not reject anyone.

- We have very good classmates at school. They help the rest, they don't fight, they don't speak bad of their classmates, they pay attention to the teachers and their parents. They want to be friends with everyone.
- We also have classmates who make fun of others; do not help neither pay attention to anyone and reject some classmates.
- Jesus looks into our hearts and is pleased when our behaviors reflect the love that God has for everyone.
- God is pleased in a very special way if together with other companions we take care of our Nature. It is the gift that, as a good Father, has given us...

If you decipher this message, you can read a very important phrase that tells us about God.
